REAC/TS Call # 2386 (08/30/2018) New Mexico: Caller is a Health Physicist who states a 50 yo male worker noted a puncture in his glove and had felt "a poke" but no pain, no bleeding, and no redness. They found 2,000 dpm removable contamination on his skin and found no wound. He was working with steel cable and it must have been a thread of the cable that punctured, smaller than a needle (hypodermic), so, an injection is more accurate. Advice/consultation from REAC/TS.
